[1] Trung Thành was a 20-year-old student when he joined Youth Career Initiative (YCI) organization in Hanoi, Vietnam. He came from a disadvantaged family. His father worked far away from the family. His mother could no longer work when she knew that her cancer had returned. Trung's father had to leave work to care for his wife. Trung said, "The treatment was very expensive and the family income could not cover our expenses. So, I had to do something; I worked to get money and became the breadwinner for my family."

[2] Trung wanted to continue his studies but he could not as he had no time or money. He needed a short, cheap course that would give him useful skills to find a job. He heard about YCI from one of his friends in Hanoi and decided to join it. "Participating in this programme was a huge turning point in my life. It gave me the chance to learn cooking skills. In six months, I was trained as a professional in a five-star hotel. It didn't cost me anything!" Trung said.

[3] At first, it was difficult for him to adjust to the training and working conditions. He did part-time jobs such as working as a waiter, a security guard or in shipping to earn extra money for the family. Sometimes he slept only four hours a day, which made him very exhausted. But Trung's hard work paid off and he was one of the best YCI graduates in Hanoi. "After my graduation, I went for an interview at the Hilton Hanoi Opera, where I trained, and was so happy to be employed at the hotel. I worked there for four years," he said.

[4] Once Trung's skills and confidence had grown and after saving and borrowing some money, he opened a restaurant with one of his friends. The restaurant was originally designed to cater to foreign visitors but they changed their plan to cater to all groups. This has had good results on the business. Trung uses the extra money to repay his loan and also to pay for his mother's medical treatment. "I feel the pressure sometimes but I can see there is a bright future waiting for me. I know that without the YCI programme, I wouldn't have had the chance to get trained and open my own restaurant," he concluded.
